The above article was published in Cognitive Science, Volume 15, Number 2, pp. 173–218. The publisher regrets the following typesetting error on page 182 within a sentence which was typeset as follows:

Lakoff's constraint can be rephrased in this way: Regular central senses imply regular extended senses: or by contra position, irregular extended senses imply regular central senses.

The last instance of "regular" should have been typeset as "irregular." Unfortunately, this error did affect the meaning of the sentence.
